

Teaching Courses, Conducting Workshops And Coaching Others As A Business

Right now you have an unprecedented opportunity to help yourself and help others at the same time in so many ways. Teaching online courses and face to face workshops, doing coaching one on one and in groups along with multiple other combinations of these interconnected businesses can be both lucrative and personally satisfying. You can have an opportunity to make a lot of money and help a lot of people in the process.

Let's see if you would be a good fit – check each one of the following that is True or that you can answer YES to;

- Do People now ask you for help and offer to pay you
- You already have some experience teaching and training at work
- Your current work involves some aspects of training and or coaching other people
- When you work with others in a training situation you really enjoy doing it
- You have done work that gave you highly developed technical skills and experience Self confidence
- Assertive
- Goal oriented
- Organized
- Open minded
- Care about other people
- Maintain absolute confidentiality
- Passionate
- Have specialized knowledge, skills and abilities
- Listening ability
- Self control
- Manage schedule, time and multiple tasks effectively
- Positive attitude
- Continuously learning and improving knowledge, skills and abilities
- Communicate effectively
- Can do sales, and willing to learn what is needed to be better at it
- Self motivated and driven to accomplish your goals

How did you do? If you can do most of these things and are willing to learn and put into practice the things you need to do to make these things happen, you are a good candidate for becoming an instructor and or a coach.

You will have some doubts about that, and some fear – if you're honest with yourself. But here is the thing with that, so does everyone else! With training and support you can overcome those fears that hold you back. You CAN help other people and you can help yourself at the same time.

If you are really serious – then join our CORE GROUP membership NOW while there are openings since it is new. So now is a great time to get in. You may also keep an eye on our courses and events – and a great way to get updates on upcoming courses and events is to sign up for email notifications.